Explanatory notes

General

The Ekkart Committee is one of the committees established in the Netherlands since 1997 to carry out research in the extensive field of post-World War II restitutions. The Committee supervises research into the origins of the 'NK collection', i.e. the collection of art objects that were recovered from Germany after World War II and have been held by the State of the Netherlands since then. Given the size of the NK collection, which comprises some 4000 objects, and the nature of the research, which involves tracing transactions that took place more than fifty years ago and of which, in many cases, very few documents have survived, the Ekkart Committee will not be able to finalise its research until the end of 2002.

In addition to supervising the research into the origins of collection items, the Committee is charged with issuing recommendations to the Minister of Education, Culture and Science on the government's restitution policy. The Committee submitted its interim recommendations to me on 26 April 2001. As stated in the accompanying letter, the Committee decided to draw up interim recommendations because in its view the urgency of policy adaptations is such, considering, among other things, the advanced age of some of the interested parties, that they should be implemented before the overall research project has been completed. In formulating its recommendations, the Committee aims to create scope for a more generous restitution policy. In its view, the strictly legal approach as laid down in the government's policy paper of 14 July 2000 is no longer acceptable.

I sent the Cabinet's response to these recommendations to the Speaker of the Lower House of Parliament on 29 June 2001, and a supplementary reaction of the government by letter of 16 November 2001. In its reaction to the Ekkart Committee recommendations, the government has not opted for a purely legal approach to the restitution issue, but rather for a more policy-oriented approach, also in the light of international developments in these matters, in which priority is given to moral rather than strictly legal arguments. This view was expressed, for example, in the outcome of the conference held in Washington in 1998 for a global discussion of World War II assets (known as the 'Washington Principles'). One of these principles is the establishment of "alternative dispute resolution mechanisms for resolving ownership issues." Countries like France and the United Kingdom have implemented this principle and have established committees charged with judging individual applications for restitution.

The establishment of an Advisory Committee in the Netherlands to consider individual applications for restitution is consistent both with the Ekkart Committee recommendations and with the international developments outlined above. The main reason for setting up an Advisory Committee was the need for the Ministry of Education, Culture and Science to decide on applications for restitution in as objective a manner as possible. Since the Minister of Education, Culture and Science, being the possessor/administrator of the NK collection, is directly concerned in the matter, the existence of an advisory committee will enhance the independence of the decision process. By letter of 7 June 2001 the parliamentary Education, Culture and Science Committee expressed its preference for an independent committee.

Based on its own experience, the Ekkart Committee currently expects that the Advisory Committee will be asked to consider 30 to 50 cases relating to objects currently held by the State. There are no indications as yet about the number of applications that might be submitted to the Advisory Committee by private individuals, nor is it clear how many years the Committee is going to need to fulfil its tasks. The figures mentioned seem to point to a term of 3 to 5 years.

Explanatory notes on each article

Article 2

The main task of the Committee is to advise the Minister of Education, Culture and Science, at his request, on individual applications for restitution of items that form part of the NK collection. In addition, the Minister may also ask for advice on restitution applications that relate to items in the state collection that do not form part of the NK collection but nevertheless came into the possession of the State due to circumstances directly related to the Nazi regime.

Following the example of similar committees abroad and at the express request of the Lower House of Parliament, the Minister may also refer to the Committee disputes between private individuals, provided that the parties involved have made a request to that effect and provided that the dispute concerns an object of which the original owner lost possession involuntarily due to circumstances directly related to the Nazi regime.

The Minister will ask the Committee to give an opinion if and when he receives an application for restitution that complies with the relevant framework conditions. The Minister himself will only directly deal with applications that evidently fall outside the Committee's remit, for example because they do not relate to the restitution of items of cultural value that were transferred within the context of World War II. It has been decided to present the applications to the Committee via the Minister so as to avoid overburdening the Committee with requests that fall outside its mandate.

The Committee's advisory framework corresponds with the relevant outlines of government policy; first and foremost, the general government policy on World War II assets as laid down in the letter issued by the government on 21 March 2000. In addition, the government has issued rules that more specifically concern the restitution of items of cultural value. These rules form part of the policy the government announced to the Lower House of Parliament in its policy paper of 14 July 2000. However, the Ekkart Committee recommendations and the government's response to them have led to major amendments to that policy. The government's letters continue to be effective and, together with the Ekkart Committee recommendations and the government's response to these recommendations, constitute the policy framework within which the Advisory Committee is to operate. It goes without saying that any further recommendations from the Ekkart Committee in the future may cause the government to make adaptations to this policy framework.

The Advisory Committee will judge any application for restitution in the light of this policy framework. It may then conclude that:

- the application, while being covered by the regular legal rules, falls beyond the Advisory Committee's mandate. If so, the Advisory Committee will incorporate this in its opinion to the Minister.
- the application falls within the Advisory Committee's mandate and therefore qualifies for an opinion.

The government also wishes to make available a facility for the settlement of disputes between private individuals concerning an object of which the original owner lost possession involuntarily due to circumstances directly related to the Nazi regime. In its assessment of such applications from private individuals the Advisory Committee will be guided by the principles of reasonableness and fairness.

The intervention by the Minister – since it is the Minister who refers disputes between private individuals to the Advisory Committee – is the result of pragmatic considerations. As it is the Minister who is responsible for ensuring that the Advisory Committee receives the support it needs, the Minister must be aware of the number of opinions the Advisory Committee is expected to issue.

Articles 3 and 4

The decisions about the Advisory Committee's size, composition and working method were taken with due regard to the need to balance the requirement of expertise against the requirement of efficiency in the formulation of Committee opinions.

The Advisory Committee is composed in such a way that at least the legal, historical and art history expertise required for the assessment of a restitution application is represented. The requirement that the chairman and deputy chairman be legal experts stems from the fact that in spite of the choice for a moral policy-oriented approach, legal expertise obviously remains indispensable in the assessment of the laws and regulations involved in applications for restitution. The availability of legal expertise is ensured in all cases, given that no opinion is formulated without the involvement of either the chairman or the deputy chairman.

The intention is for the Advisory Committee to comprise seven members from the time of its inception. It is up to the chairman to decide which particular members, in a specific case, should contribute to the formulation of an opinion. The involvement of a member in a particular application for restitution may influence this decision. The number of members to be involved in the opinion on a particular application will depend on the complexity of the case. As a minimum requirement, each application must be considered by the chairman or the deputy chairman and at least two other committee members.

Article 5

The Minister will provide a Committee Secretariat that is able to give the advisory committee the required level of support. The Committee Secretary must be a qualified lawyer (meester in de rechten). In addition, the Secretariat should be able to offer research capacity as well as the required level of administrative and organisational support. The size of the Secretariat will be variable and geared to the Advisory Committee's workload.

Article 6

It is of the utmost importance that the Advisory Committee has access to all the relevant information in drawing up its recommendations: both information from claimants and information provided by the Ministry or third parties.

I have lifted the restrictions on the public accessibility of records filed in State Archives by virtue of Article 15, fifth paragraph of the 1995 Public Archives Act so as to enable the Advisory Committee to gather all the information it needs in the shortest possible time. This obviously only concerns those records that are relevant to the execution of the Advisory Committee's task. The fact that the Committee is allowed to inspect restricted documents does not automatically open up those documents to others as well, given that the members of the Advisory Committee themselves are bound to observe secrecy under Article 2:5 of the General Administrative Law Act regarding information that comes to their knowledge and the confidential nature of which is evident.

Article 10

By the time this Decree establishing the Advisory Committee was signed, the six persons referred to in this Article had already expressed their willingness to become members of the committee. This is why I have provided for their appointment in this Decree. One more member will be appointed (separately) as soon as possible.
